

I knew I needed to show you the Water Giant, but couldn't imagine how to pull it together until I saw this amazing photo—and there it is.¹ I didn't do anything to it except darken his left eye a little and decorate his beard with skeletons.² Don't overlook the one standing on the giant's right arm to talk to Efran. I'm pretty sure that's Pindar.

But the crowning touch is the gorgeous photo of the cliffs of Moher Liscannor Ireland.³ So I threw in a few trees⁴ and a fence and called it a day. What more do you need?

PS. I am claiming no copyright on this illustration.

1. On Pixabay, but no photographer credited
2. From rawpixel. That they're isolated on a transparent background makes them very easy to use.
3. Photographed by Giuseppe Milo on Wikimedia Commons. This is the second time I've used a photograph of those cliffs (by a different photographer). The first time was for Efran Meets Leviathan (Book 11).
4. Isolated tree silhouettes, also on rawpixel
